

SORRY NOW SHE SHOT HUSBAND

Mrs. Charles Kurtz, Who Wounded Spouse in the Shoulder, Is Held Without Bail to Await Result of Injury.

SAYS HE TOLD HER SHE WAS EXTRAVAGANT.

"I Was Mad Enough to Kill Him," She Declares—Shortly After the Shooting the Pair Kissed and Made Up.

Tearful and repentant, Mrs. Frances Kurtz, a bride of a year, was held without bail in Yorkville Court to-day to await the result of the injury of her husband, whom she shot early this morning.

Mrs. Kurtz is a pretty woman, with a wealth of black hair, pearly teeth and had a pair of dark soulful eyes that are said to have been like lightning.

"I didn't mean to shoot him," said she after the policeman had told the charge and she had been held. "I did and I didn't. I was mad enough to kill him at that."

"We were married a year ago in Pittsburg and came here, going to live at No. 63 East Sixteenth street. My husband is an agent for a photographic supply house. He did not do as well as he expected, and some of my jewelry was put in pawn. He would not take it out yesterday, nor give me the money to do so. We quarrelled. Why, I said all kinds of mean things to him—he told me I was extravagant and I don't know what else."

"I put on my things and left the house, and going to a friend of mine, she persuaded me to go to the theatre. I saw a play and I was very much interested. I was alone and I was very much interested."

"When I went home, Charles was worse than ever. He said all kinds of mean things and I told him I would try to do as he said. He didn't let me, and so I left. I went to the theatre and I was very much interested."

"I was mad. I pointed the pistol at him, and he said, 'I will shoot you if you do not stop.' I just touched the trigger, and it went off. I'd given anything in the world not to have done it, and now I want to go to the hospital and nurse him. He won't let me, and the woman who could shoot when she had been angered sat down on the prison bench in the Yorkville Prison and sobbed as though her heart would break."

Kissed and Made Up. The bullet that Mrs. Kurtz fired into her husband hit him in the shoulder. He cursed a bit and she screamed. Then she recovered and hurried him to a drug store. A policeman was called and believing the matter was beyond the point where it could be termed a family argument he sent Kurtz to the hospital and arrested Mrs. Kurtz.

Before they separated they had kissed and made up. Mrs. Kurtz said she would try to do as he said. He didn't let me, and so I left. I went to the theatre and I was very much interested."

The pistol probably will be tied with blue ribbon and hung in the room as a warning to refrain from quarrels in the future.

BACK FROM PRISON HE SHOTS AT WIFE

Negro Coachman Jackson, After Serving Eighteen Months for Writing Threatening Letters, Attempts Murder.

Having just returned from the Penitentiary, where he served eighteen months for threatening to kill Bunice Van Vechten, the sixteen-year-old daughter of Mr. Samuel H. Van Vechten, Emory C. Jackson, a negro coachman, went to the home of his wife, at No. 74 Prospect avenue, Jamaica, last night and tried to murder her.

The woman lay in bed when the man entered the house. "You have opened some of my letters," he burst forth, and then drawing a revolver he began firing. The first bullet went through the pillow on which her head lay. The second buried itself in the wall and the third ploughed through the top of her head, making a scalp wound.

The negro was arrested and the injured woman was cared for by physicians. It is said that her condition is not serious, and that she will prosecute Jackson.

Jackson was formerly employed by Mr. Van Vechten as coachman at his summer home near Jamaica. Miss Van Vechten began receiving letters from some anonymous writer. The letters were full of abuse and she went on becoming threatening. The girl had turned the first of them over to her father and he set about to capture the writer. So violent did the threats become that detectives were employed. Miss Van Vechten was threatened with death if she did not stop writing. His arrest followed and after a trial he was sentenced to the penitentiary.

When Jackson was arraigned in court after his arrest for annoying Miss Van Vechten the feeling against him by the good people of Jamaica was so bitter that for a time he was threatened with being lynched. He took his sentence meekly.

Miss Van Vechten is regarded as one of the most beautiful girls in Jamaica. She is a daughter of the negro until her mother's death, when her father married a white woman. It is said that she became very nervous lest he repeat his annoying attacks.

FAMOUS GERMAN ACTRESS MARIE GEISTINGER DEAD.

Marie Geistinger, the actress and singer, who died at Klagenfurt, near Lake Wörth, Austria, was one of the most famous actresses and singers of her day. Her remarkable career, covering more than sixty years, is a complete illustration of artistic versatility, developed and directed by the training of the German stage.

Mme. Geistinger was seventy-five years old, having been born in Graz, Germany, July 26, 1828. She was the daughter of a pensioned Russian court actor, and her first appearance was in a child's part in her father's playhouse in 1844. She soon became a popular favorite and eventually became a leading actress in the most prominent Vienna theatres.

In 1863 she gave her attention to opera and almost immediately became a favorite in the works of Offenbach, Suppe and other composers, though she still continued her studies for the legitimate dramatic stage. Between 1870 and 1880 she played brilliant engagements in all the leading German theatres and then came to the Thalia Theatre in New York, meeting with brilliant success during an engagement of one hundred nights. She was equally at home in the vaudevilles of Vienna and the works of the master dramatists of Germany. Her comedy was delightful, her drama convincing and her burlesque irresistible.

In her later years her hold on the appearance and enthusiasm of youth was remarkable. As an old woman she was irresistible in ingenue roles. Mme. Geistinger made several visits to this country, the last in 1897.

CUT OFF WIFE'S HAIR TO KEEP HER AT HOME

Now Gorman Is in Jail Until He Can Furnish Security for Support of Child-Mother.

"When a fellow gets married he has got to work hard to earn money to pay for his wife. That's the correct definition of married life."

"I cut off my wife's hair to keep her in the house and now she is keeping me in jail because I can't get a bondman to insure the payment of $1 a week for her support."

These are the words of Bartley Gorman, a young cooper of Bayonne, N. J., who is now in jail because he cut his wife's hair off. She had him arrested and says she will never live with him again.

The Gorman's live at No. 524 Avenue C, Bayonne. Mrs. Gorman is but seventeen years old and she is the mother of a two-months-old baby.

According to the story told by Mrs. Gorman, she suspected her husband of meeting another woman. She followed him and says she saw him meet two young women and put his arm around the waist of one of them. Then she made her presence known. A quarrel followed and Gorman accompanied her back to their home. When she went to bed he cut off her hair to prevent her going out on the street again. Mrs. Gorman had her husband arrested and then borrowed the wig of a woman who lives upstairs so that she could go to court.

"Here I am, a girl only seventeen years old, and I had the most beautiful head of hair of any woman in Bayonne. And now it's gone. I have my husband in jail, but what good is that? I am left without a cent. I can't go out of the house to work for I am a holy show with my hair gone. If the lady upstairs will lend me her hair to-day I will go out to see the postmaster to see if I will take care of my baby while I hunt for work. I will never live with my husband again." So said Mrs. Gorman to a reporter.

"If you know of any fellow who's engaged, tell him to cut it. It's an invitation to marry at any stage of the game."

So walls Mr. Gorman in jail.

SUGGESTS LIPTON FOR AMBASSADOR

As Britain's Representative at Washington, Senator Kearns Thinks He Would Draw the Two Peoples Closer.

SALT LAKE CITY, Oct. 1.—"If King Edward would bring still closer together the English and American peoples, and if he would weld more firmly the commercial interests between them and maintain the cordial relations of every character existing, he will make Sir Thomas Lipton next Ambassador to the United States," said United States Senator Thomas Kearns in speaking of the death of Sir Michael Herbert.

"Sir Thomas Lipton has done more during the last fifteen months to increase the good fellowship and genuine friendship existing between the American and English peoples," continued Senator Kearns, "than all of the men and women in the British dominion."

Rescued Man, Resumes Work

Peter Hart, sixty years old, of No. 186 Alabama avenue, Brooklyn, slipped from the dock at the foot of Clarkson street and fell into the Hudson River early to-day. He was rescued by Dennis Mahoney, a man who registered at the hotel last night about 11 o'clock with a man who registered as Dennis Mahoney. He asked to be called at 6 o'clock and told the clerk to arouse his companion at 9:30 o'clock. The man left shortly after 6 o'clock and was heard to say "good by" to the man.

When the woman was called it was discovered that she had died. A doctor from Gouverneur Hospital said that it was evident that the woman had passed away an hour or so when he saw the body. It was merely a case for the coroner, he said.

No one in the vicinity of Chatham Square seemed to know the woman. She was not an inhabitant of the resorts of the neighborhood. Nor was the man known in the locality.

There were no signs of poison, no marks of violence. "I should say a hard life and lack of food," said the policeman on watch.

WHEELS LICKED, WHIPS WHIRLED

Short Cab Driver and Husky Truckman Had a Lively Encounter on Fifth Avenue and Raced Along the Street.

YARDS OF TONGUE LASHING.

When Arraigned in Court To-Day the Contestants Were Arm-in-Arm and Each Positively Declined to Make a Charge.

When Jefferson Market Court opened to-day a policeman standing on the stoop said:

"The lion and the lamb have lain down together. Here come Lemoth, the truckman, and Large, the cabman, arm in arm and loving."

As the policeman spoke two men approached. One was long and thin, with a tall hat. The other was short and broad and his cap and clothing showed him to be one of those husky truckmen. The first was Thomas Large, of No. 33 East Fifty-third street, a cabman. The second was Charles Lemoth, a truckman, of No. 650 Fulton street, Brooklyn.

The men were called before the Magistrate as soon as they entered the court.

"What's the charge?" asked the Magistrate.

"No charge," replied the truckman.

"What's the charge?" repeated the Magistrate, this time to Large.

"No charge," answered Large. This speech coming from a cabman made the court officers stare. "We've made up," cried the cabman. "We made out to be friends."

Both Cabman-Truckman Tangle.

"Discharged then," the Magistrate called, and the cabman and truckman made for a liquid dispensary across the street and told each other how they had both been wrong in getting into that tangle at Twenty-sixth street and Fifth avenue last night. It was a red cabman-truckman tangle, according to Mounted Policeman Walsh, who arrested both men.

Lemth was driving his truck west in Twenty-sixth street when there came a cab for a cab, and Large, who was standing in front of the truck, saw the cab wheel and started for the fare. Some way the cab wheels got locked in the truck wheels and the truckman shouted "You are a bum driver!"

"You are just a plain, ordinary bum," replied Large. "There's no driver about it."

"You are a night-hawk geezer!" yelled Lemth, hitting his team and only making the look of wheels the tighter.

"I stand in front of Martin's. I'll let you know," answered the cabman, highly indignant.

"Don't doubt that. And I bet you stand all the time. Ain't much business doing with you," retorted Lemth.

This was too much for Large. He had all the patience he could handle and he was tired of the truckman's way of talking. He raised his whip in his right hand and raised in the air. Lemth saw it descend and dodged the blow. "You've got to pay for it," called out Large. "You've got to pay for it."

Then Whips Began to Fly.

"Which scratch?" asked Lemth, and at the same instant the truckman's whip fell and wrapped around the cabman's neck.

"You're 'em," returned Large, and then whips began to fly. In the excitement the truck horse and the cab horse started and together with wheels locked and whips playing and cracking, a running fight was started up Fifth avenue.

The truckman and cabman were under arrest and both men were told they were under arrest.

"He's a night-hawk geezer and a bum driver," said Large, as he and Lemth were being led away to the West Thirtieth street station.

"Didn't mean it," said Lemth as he and the cabman shook hands and separated after the court proceedings to-day.

"Hope we'll meet again," answered the cabman, and he continued to go on and started off for a fare at Martin's.

THIRTY-TWO WILLING TO TACKLE "POISON" DIET.

Intrepid Subjects of Experiments to Be Given Holiday at Christmas Time.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1.—The time for assembling the new "Poison Squad," under the direction of Dr. H. W. Wiley, has been changed from Oct. 5 to 15. By postponing the beginning of the experiments until the middle of the month, an uninterrupted period of eight weeks will be obtained prior to the Christmas holidays.

Under the new arrangement, a Christmas vacation of thirty days will be granted the "boarders," in which time they will be permitted to repair any ravages due to the "poison" diet. The conclusion of the vacation, Dr. Wiley will be able to judge how a holiday season fare of fruit cake, eggnog, Canterbury punch, and other Christmas delicacies, subject to all kinds of adulterations, compares with the full-fledged poison fare. This will give him additional unofficial data from which to draw deductions.

The tests this winter will be on salicylic acid. The number of men to be experimented on will be thirty. Thirty applications have been received.

COURT PROTECTS WOMAN.

Guardian for Plaintiff in Strange Breach of Promise Suit.

MOHRISTOWN, N. J., Oct. 1.—Mrs. Fester Woodhull, eighty-two years old, has been declared mentally unbalanced, and not able to look after her property.

She is the woman who last spring was the victim of a breach of promise suit. She lost her case when testimony was offered that she was a feeble old woman, a widow from whom she had not been divorced. Mrs. Woodhull is quite healthy, and since the breach of promise episode has been haunted by men from different parts of the country, who wish to marry her.

It is to protect her from these men that the Chancellor will appoint a guardian.

CHILD RUN OVER BY CAR DIES.

Samuel Bidner, two years old, of No. 321 Madison street, died in Gouverneur Hospital to-day from injuries received when he was run over by a car on Broadway and Scammon streets on Sept. 26. The child was taken to the hospital by its mother.

TRAIN KILLS TRACKWALKER.

Charles Seay, fifty-nine years old, living at Beachester road and Saratoga avenue, a track walker for the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad, was killed while walking on a track near his home to-day by a southbound train.

VANDERBILT ANGRY, CLOSES BILTMORE

Because of Thefts by Highly Paid Employees He Shuts Great Property for a Year and Discharges Many.

ASHVILLE, N. C., Oct. 1.—Because of the alleged dishonesty of employees of the great Biltmore estate of George W. Vanderbilt is closed and its owner will leave it in the hands of only a few caretakers and watchmen for at least one year. All the other servants have been discharged.

Mr. Vanderbilt took pride in the assertion that all the employees on the estate were better paid than the average laborers in the State, and when he found there was dishonesty among them he was disgusted. It is said that an investigation of the books, upon a suspicion of robbery, disclosed the fact that the estate had been looted of $2,000.

The owner determined not to prosecute the persons under suspicion but to close the mansion instead. The loss was as nothing to so wealthy a man as Mr. Vanderbilt, but it was the principle that angered him. He determined to discharge not only the ones most suspected but also most of the other employees.

The house will be closed on Saturday, at which time Mr. Vanderbilt will leave Asheville for New York. It is understood that his friends here that he will sail for Europe soon after reaching New York and that he will not set foot in the Biltmore house again for a year at least, and perhaps for longer period.

The forestry department has not been touched, owing to the fact that the master of Biltmore has practically nothing to do with it. In it are a large number of young men from the East learning forestry under Dr. Schenk, the head forester of the estate, who receives fees from these students in person.

William Hanson, a retired business man, of White Plains, took his family to the county fair yesterday. When they returned home he found the entire house rifled and almost everything easily portable and of value removed.

It took Mr. Hanson some little time to realize that his house had been burglarized by a skillful operator. Then he went about the neighborhood questioning his friends. They said that they had seen a "nice, stout-looking gentleman" leave his house with a valise, several big guns and other things.

Mr. Hanson owns a vicious dog, which sits, usually, on the steps of his house. When Mr. Hanson left yesterday for the day's outing he told the dog to be good and take care of the property. The dog wagged his tail for an affirmative.

This is what the stranger gentleman packed off in Mr. Hanson's valise: Two watches, valued at $200; several pairs of rings and much silverware, a family ticket on the Harlem road, some razors, a revolver, taken from underneath the pillow on which Mr. Hanson's head rests at night, and other little odds and ends. A rifle and a shotgun, in leather cases, were packed away in the burglar's other hand.

All this was done between 10:30 and 11 in the morning.

The White Plains police are looking for clues to-day.
